A Day in the Life of the Jacobs Institute

Ever wondered what a typical day at the Jacobs Institute looks like?

Come peek inside, to see how we collaborate with Kaleida Health's physicians and University at Buffalo's researchers to foster medical innovation.

The Jacobs Institute mission is to create the next generation of medical technology to improve the treatment of vascular diseases—such as heart attack and stroke—in Western New York and beyond.

The institute was named in memory of the late Lawrence D. Jacobs, MD. Located in the heart of the Buffalo Niagara Medical Campus (BNMC) in downtown Buffalo, the Jacobs Institute is positioned between University at Buffalo's Clinical and Translational Research Center (CTRC) and Kaleida Health's Gates Vascular Institute (GVI).

As such, the Jacobs Institute is uniquely positioned to foster collaborations of the best minds and collisions of new ideas.

We invite you to come innovate with us.
